

Policy Breakfast

IID Policy Breakfast series by IID promotes evidence-informed policy debate among key influencers of policy community.

IID has been conducting Policy Breakfasts since 2015 on different policy issues in partnership with national and international institutions.

To create a candid and conducive environment for open discussion, a limited number of high-impact participants are invited and Chatham House Rules are followed. Discussions during the event remains private in absence of media and summary of the discussion are shared without attributing any opinion to any specific participant.

“ I really enjoyed the Policy Breakfast because it is not only an event for policymakers but it brings together ... representatives of different political parties as well as members of civil society. ”

Adv Tarana Halim, MP
Hon. State Minister for Post & Telecom. Division

“ For policy changes, three things are needed—leadership, strong civil society support for change, and good ideas on the table so that policy makers can make the right decisions. And in my view, the policy breakfast format that you have found here brings all those three elements together. ”

Simon Maxwell
Executive Chairman
Climate and Development Knowledge Network (CDKN)
